Description

Hyaluronic acid is a mucopolysaccharide, which is a type of carbohydrate that is naturally present in the body. It binds well with water which causes it to form a gel like substance. Its main function is to keep the body moist, for example the skin, muscles or joints.

Similar to oil in an engine, hyaluronic acid is the lubricant of the body. With age, the viscosity in the body is reduced because the hyaluronic acid content in our body keep decreasing. Therefore, taking hyaluronic acid as a supplement can counteract this trend.

The hyaluronic acid used in our capsules is produced in a special yeast fermentation process. This results in a much better bioavailability and helps the body to absorb it much better.

Pomegranate is a fruit which originates in the middle east where it has always been popular. Pomegranate contains polyphenols which have strong antioxidative properties. Pomegranate is presently in the center of numerous studies.
